Turkey-U.S. Relations: Timeline and Brief Historical Context

This timeline tracks major developments from the beginning of close U.S.-Turkey ties after World War II to the present. The information provides context for lawmakers assessing the tenor and trajectory of current bilateral relations on issues ranging from general strategic cooperation to timely regional concerns (Syria and Iraq, Kurds, Islamic State) and domestic Turkish politics.

Early Cold War Partners (1945-1962)
Soviet pressure on the Turkish government to allow free passage through the Turkish straits (the Bosphorus and Dardanelles) and its territorial claims in eastern Anatolia threatened to precipitate hostilities between the two states, whose predecessors (the Russian and Ottoman Empires) had fought 12 wars over the preceding four centuries. Turkey turned to the United States for support. Mutual opposition to Soviet expansion would underpin Turkey-U.S. ties in the coming decades.

- 1945 Turkey declares war on Germany and Japan in February; becomes founding member of the United Nations
- 1946 In response to Soviet demands on Turkey for shared administration of the straits, the United States counters Soviet pressure by sending ships to Turkish waters
- 1947 Congress designates Turkey (along with Greece) a special recipient of anti-Soviet aid under the Truman Doctrine
- 1950 Turkish troops join U.S.-U.N. forces in the Korean War
- 1952 Turkey becomes a member of NATO
- 1954 U.S. and Turkey agree to joint use of what becomes Incirlik air base; U.S. and Turkey sign first status of forces agreement
- 1955 Turkey helps form Baghdad Pact to resist Soviet aggression
- 1960 First military coup in Turkey; civilian rule returns with elections in 1961
- 1962 Resolution of Cuban Missile Crisis includes U.S. agreement to remove nuclear-armed Jupiter missiles (judged by the U.S. to be obsolete) from Turkey.

Allies amid Challenges (1963-1978)
U.S.-Turkey relations were particularly challenged by Turkey’s frequent clashes with fellow NATO member Greece over the ethnically divided island of Cyprus. Anti-Americanism grew as Turks increasingly debated the benefits and drawbacks of the bilateral relationship.

- 1964 Letter from President Lyndon Johnson to Turkish Prime Minister Ismet Inonu (known as the “Johnson Letter”) communicates U.S. opposition to Turkish intervention in Cyprus after ethnic Greek-Turkish power sharing breaks down
- 1971 Turkey’s second military coup occurs with the government’s resignation amid increasing street violence; elections resume in 1973
- 1974 Turkey, using U.S.-supplied equipment, occupies the northern third of the island of Cyprus (an occupation that has continued to the present) on behalf of Turkish Cypriot minority, following a coup that installed a more pro-Greek government on the island
- 1975 Congress freezes aid and imposes arms embargo on Turkey for its actions in Cyprus
- 1978 Turkey abrogates U.S. status of forces agreement; takes control of U.S. installations; U.S. forces performing NATO functions remain

The 1979 Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and Iranian revolution heightened the strategic importance of the Turkey-U.S. relationship for American interests in the broader Middle East.

- 1980 United States and Turkey sign Defense and Economic Cooperation Agreement
- 1984 Kurdistan Workers’ Party (PKK) begins significant operations in its armed insurgency in southeastern Turkey

Turkey’s relative importance for U.S. policymakers declined in the immediate aftermath of the Gulf War and the collapse of the Soviet Union, but focus remained on a number of regional developments involving Turkey.
