Child Care Entitlement to States

Overview
The Child Care Entitlement to States (CCES) was created by the 1996 welfare reform law (P.L. 104-193). This law authorized the CCES in Section 418 of the Social Security Act, which directly appropriates annual mandatory child care funding for states and tribes. The law calls for CCES funds to be integrated, at the state level, with discretionary allotments from the Child Care and Development Block Grant (CCDBG). The law also requires CCES funds to be spent under CCDBG Act rules. In combination, the CCES and CCDBG are commonly called the Child Care and Development Fund (CCDF). The CCDF is administered by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS).

Legislative Evolution
The current structure of federal child care funding streams is linked to the system that existed prior to 1996, when the welfare reform law simultaneously repealed, created, and consolidated federal child care programs. Before this, four separate federal programs supported child care for low-income families. Each program had its own eligibility criteria and program rules. Three of these programs were linked to the old welfare system, Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), while one of these programs (CCDBG) was targeted to low-income working families not connected to the welfare system (see Figure 1). Jurisdiction for these four child care programs was split across multiple congressional committees.

Figure 1. Legislative Evolution of the CCDF

| WELFARE-RELATED |
|-----------------|-----------------|
| 1. AFDC Child Care |
| Families receiving welfare |
| 2. Transitional Child Care |
| Families leaving AFDC (12 months) |
| 3. At-Risk Child Care |
| Families at-risk of AFDC eligibility |
| NON-WELFARE |
| 4. CCDBG Low-Income working families at or below 75% SM |

Child Care and Development Fund
1 set of program rules
1 target population (85% SMI)
1 state lead agency
2 funding authorizations:
Mandatory (SSA, CCES) W&M, Finance
Discretionary (CCDBG Act) E&W, HELP

The 1996 law repealed the three welfare-related funding streams, created a new mandatory child care funding stream (CCES), and amended the CCDBG Act. In an effort to streamline and simplify administration of these funding streams, the law generally applied CCDBG Act rules to CCES funds. Since enactment, the Senate Finance and House Ways and Means (W&M) committees have generally exercised jurisdiction over the CCES, while the Senate Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions (HELP) and House Education and the Workforce (E&W) committees have generally exercised jurisdiction over the CCDBG.

Authorization Status
The 1996 welfare reform law authorized and directly appropriated CCES funding for each of FY1997-FY2002. Temporary extensions provided CCES funding into FY2006, when the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005 (P.L. 109-171) reauthorized the CCES and directly appropriated $2.917 billion annually through FY2010. Since then, the CCES has been funded at the same level ($2.917 billion) by a series of short- or medium-term extensions. The current extension is scheduled to expire on December 7, 2018.

The CCDBG Act—which establishes the program rules by which CCES funds are administered at the state level—was reauthorized through FY2020 by P.L. 113-186.

Allocation Formula
The law requires HHS to reserve between 1% and 2% of CCES funds for tribes and tribal organizations. In addition, FY2019 CCDBG appropriations provisions allow HHS to reserve up to 0.5% for technical assistance and 0.5% for research. Remaining CCES funds are allocated in two parts.

- First, each state receives a fixed amount each year, equal to the federal funds the state received for welfare-related child care programs in the mid-1990s. This amount totals $1.2 billion annually and is sometimes called “guaranteed” mandatory funding, as there are no state maintenance-of-effort (MOE) or matching requirements.

- Second, remaining CCES funds ($1.7 billion annually) are allotted to states based on each state’s share of children under age 13. To receive these funds, a state must meet a MOE requirement set at 100% of the amount the state spent on welfare-related child care programs in the mid-1990s. This amount totals $888 million annually. In addition, states must match these federal funds with state dollars (totaling about $1.3 billion annually) at the Medicaid matching rate.

Discretionary CCDBG funds are allocated using a separate formula, which is based on each state’s share of children under age five, children receiving free- and reduced-price lunches, and state per capita income.

Source: Prepared by the Congressional Research Service (CRS).
Notes: SSA = Social Security Act. SMI = State Median Income.
The CCDBG Act stipulates that eligible children must:

- be under age 13 (or older in certain circumstances);
- have a parent who is working or attending job training (unless the child is receiving protective services);
- have family income no greater than 85% of state median income (SMI), or lower depending on state policy; and
- have no more than $1 million in family assets.

States commonly adopt initial income eligibility levels below the federal maximum. At the start of FY2017, state income thresholds for initial eligibility ranged from an estimated 33% to 85% of SMI for a family of three. Because the CCDF is not an entitlement to individuals, states are not required to serve all eligible children.

Payment Methods
States may contract with child care providers to reserve slots for CCDF children, but it is more common for families to receive a voucher (or certificate) for child care services, allowing them to select the provider of their choice. In FY2016, 89% of children were served by vouchers.

Provider Reimbursement Rates
States set the payment rates for child care providers serving participating children. Payment rates must take into account market rate costs. HHS recommends that states set payment rates at the 75th percentile of the market rate. It is common for states to use a tiered system, issuing higher payments to providers meeting certain criteria, such as those meeting high quality standards or serving special populations.

Parental Cost-Sharing
The CCDBG Act generally requires parents to share in the cost of child care, though states may waive co-payments in special circumstances. States set sliding fee scales, based on income, family size, and other factors. HHS suggests that states set such fees at no more than 7% of family income.

Enhanced Health and Safety Rules
The CCDBG Act of 2014 (P.L. 113-186) strengthened federal requirements related to health and safety, licensing, and enforcement. Under the reauthorized CCDBG Act,

- states must establish and enforce minimum health and safety standards covering several broad areas, such as first aid, building safety, and emergency preparedness;
- all providers receiving CCDF funds must complete pre-service and ongoing training on health and safety topics;
- states must set age-specific standards for group size limits and child-to-provider ratios;
- states must conduct pre-licensure and annual unannounced inspections for all licensed CCDF providers, and annual inspections for license-exempt CCDF providers;
- states must ensure licensing inspectors are trained and qualified, and must set inspector-to-provider ratios; and
- states must conduct criminal background checks on applicable child care providers and staff members.

Children Served
Preliminary data indicate that 1.37 million children were served by the CCDF in an average month in FY2016. Nearly two-thirds of the children served in an average month were under the age of six.

Karen E. Lynch, klynch@crs.loc.gov, 7-6899