Monuments and Memorials Authorized and Completed Under the Commemorative Works Act in the District of Columbia

Updated April 29, 2021
Summary

Since the enactment of the Commemorative Works Act (CWA) in 1986, Congress has authorized 42 commemorative works to be placed in the District of Columbia or its environs. Twenty-one of these works have been completed and dedicated.

This report contains a catalog of the authorized works that have been completed and dedicated since 1986. For each completed memorial, the report provides a brief summary of its authorization and a description of the memorial. A picture of each work is also included. The Appendix includes a map showing each completed memorial’s location.

Introduction

Since November 1986, the Commemorative Works Act (CWA) has provided the legal framework for the placement of commemorative works in the District of Columbia. The CWA was enacted to establish a statutory process for ensuring “that future commemorative works in areas administered by the National Park Service (NPS) and the General Services Administration (GSA) in the District of Columbia and its environs (1) are appropriately designed, constructed, and located and (2) reflect a consensus of the lasting significance of the subjects involved.” Since the CWA’s enactment, 42 memorials have been authorized for placement in the District of Columbia.

This report provides a catalog of the memorials in the District of Columbia that have been authorized, completed, and dedicated since the passage of the CWA. A summary of the work is provided. The report also provides information—located within text boxes for easy reference—on the statute(s) authorizing the work; the authorized organization; legislative extensions, if any; the memorial’s location; and the dedication date. A picture of each work is also included. The Appendix includes a map showing each memorial’s location.

Commemorative Works Areas of the District of Columbia

The CWA divides land under the jurisdiction of the NPS and GSA in the District of Columbia and its environs into three sections for the placement of memorials: the Reserve, Area I, and Area II. For each area, the standards for memorial placement are specified in law, and congressional approval of monument location is required. Property not under the jurisdiction of the NPS or GSA is not subject to the CWA. See Figure A-1 for a map of the commemorative works areas of the District of Columbia.

Reserve

The Reserve was created in November 2003, by P.L. 108-126, to prohibit the addition of future memorials in an area defined as “the great cross-axis of the Mall, which generally extends from the United States Capitol to the Lincoln Memorial, and from the White House to the Jefferson Memorial.” This area is legally considered “a substantially completed work of civic art.” Within this area, “to preserve the integrity of the Mall … the siting of new commemorative works is prohibited.”

Area I

Created as part of the original CWA statute in 1986, Area I is reserved for commemorative works of “preeminent historical and lasting significance to the United States.”5 Area I is roughly bounded by the West Front of the Capitol; Pennsylvania Avenue NW (between 1st and 15th Streets NW); Lafayette Square; 17th Street NW (between H Street and Constitution Avenue); Constitution Avenue NW (between 17th and 23rd Streets); the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts waterfront area; Theodore Roosevelt Island; National Park Service land in Virginia surrounding the George Washington Memorial Parkway; the 14th Street Bridge area; and Maryland Avenue SW, from Maine Avenue SW, to Independence Avenue SW, at the United States Botanic Garden.

Area II

Also created as part of the original CWA statute, Area II is reserved for “subjects of lasting historical significance to the American people.”6 Area II encompasses all sections of the District of Columbia and its environs not part of the Reserve or Area I.

Authorized Commemorative Works

Since the passage of the Commemorative Works Act (CWA) in 1986, Congress has authorized 42 commemorative works to be placed in the District of Columbia or its environs, 21 of which have been completed and dedicated. The other 21 authorized commemorative works either are in progress, have a lapsed authorization, or have had their authorization repealed. Table 1 lists the commemorative works authorized and dedicated since 1986.

The Secretary of the Interior or the Administrator of General Services, after seeking the advice of the National Capital Memorial Advisory Commission, can recommend that a memorial be placed in Area I. If either the Secretary or the Administrator recommends placement in Area I, he or she must notify the House Committee on Natural Resources and the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources. The Secretary or the Administrator notifies Congress by sending a letter to the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate. If the recommendation is not enacted into law within 150 calendar days, the recommendation is not adopted and the memorial sponsor must consider sites in Area II.

a. The United States Air Force Memorial was constructed on land not governed by the Commemorative Works Act. For more information, see the section below on the “United States Air Force” Memorial and the Air Force Memorial Foundation, http://www.airforcememorial.org.

b. In authorizing the plaque to honor other Vietnam veterans who died as a result of service in the Vietnam War, Congress specifically exempted the American Battle Monuments Commission from 40 U.S.C. §8903(c), which prohibits the creation of a commemorative work to an event, individuals, or groups “until the 25th anniversary of the event, death of the individual, or death of the last surviving member of the group.”

Completed Commemorative Works

Since 1986, 21 commemorative works have been completed within the District of Columbia and its environs. These memorials honored groups of individuals, such as women who have served in the U.S. military; veterans from World War II as well as the Korean War; and individuals including George Mason, Francis Scott Key, and Mahatma Gandhi. For each memorial, a short background and a picture is included. Additionally, a text box is provided that includes information on the authorizing statute; the sponsor organization; statutory extensions of the sponsor’s authorization, if necessary; the memorial’s location; and the date of dedication.

7 Pursuant to the Commemorative Works Act (40 U.S.C. §8903(e)(1)), all sponsor groups are provided with a seven-year period to complete (i.e., dedicate) the memorial. This time period can be extended administratively if the Secretary...
Women in Military Service for America

In October 1986, Congress authorized the Women in Military Service for America Memorial Foundation to construct a commemorative work, on federal land, to honor women who had served in the U.S. Armed Forces. Located at the ceremonial entrance to Arlington National Cemetery, the Women in Military Service for America Memorial is a “30-foot high curved neoclassical retaining wall” and a fountain. While the foundation has raised nonfederal funds to construct the memorial, because the memorial was built to complement the existing main gate and plaza of Arlington National Cemetery, Congress authorized the Secretary of the Army to provide “engineering, design, construction management, and related services on a reimbursable basis.” Figure 1 shows the Women in Military Service for America Memorial.

Francis Scott Key

In October 1986, the Francis Scott Key Park Foundation was authorized by Congress to construct a commemorative work on public grounds in the District of Columbia to “honor and in commemoration of Francis Scott Key, the author of the words to ‘The Star Spangled Banner,’ our National Anthem, who lived and practiced law in Washington, District of Columbia at the time he penned those immortal words.”

The memorial is located in a park close to the site of Francis Scott Key’s home, which was demolished in 1947, and is adjacent to the Georgetown entrance to Key Bridge, which is also named for Francis Scott Key. The memorial consists of a round stone base and a bust of Francis Scott Key and is shown in Figure 2.

Korean War Veterans

In October 1986, the American Battle Monuments Commission\textsuperscript{13} was authorized by Congress to construct a memorial on federal land in Washington, DC, “to honor members of the Armed Forces of the United States who served in the Korean War, particularly those who were killed in action, are still listed as missing in action, or were held as prisoners of war.”\textsuperscript{14} Located to the southeast of the Lincoln Memorial, the Korean War Veterans Memorial contains 19 stainless steel statues, a mural wall etched with bas-relief images of photographs of Korean War scenes from the National

During its relatively short duration from June 25, 1950 to July 27, 1953, 54,246 Americans died in support of their country. Of these, 8,200 are listed as missing in action or lost or buried at sea. In addition 103,284 were wounded during the conflict.”¹⁶ Figure 3 shows the Korean War Veterans Memorial.

¹⁷ The Korean War Veterans Memorial authorization was amended by P.L. 100-202 (101 Stat. 1329, December 22, 1987) to establish a Treasury Fund for memorial expenses and for the deposit of private contributions to the memorial.

American Armored Force

In November 1986, Congress authorized 25 private armored force committees and associations to create a memorial on federal land to “honor members of the American Armored Force who have served in armored units.”19 The memorial was authorized to “commemorate the exceptional professionalism of the members of the American Armored Force and their efforts to maintain peace worldwide.”20 Located on Memorial Drive at the entrance to Arlington National Cemetery,21 the American Armored Force Memorial (Figure 4) depicts armored forces engaged in battle surrounded by the logos of the various armored divisions.

21 This section of Memorial Drive has long been designated for “unit” and “branch” Armed Forces Memorials. Other memorials, all authorized prior to the Commemorative Works Act, on this section of Memorial Drive include the 101st Army Airborne Division Monument, the Fourth Infantry Division Memorial, the Seabees Monument, and the Spanish War Veterans Memorial (known as “The Hiker”).
Vietnam Women

In November 1988, Congress authorized the Vietnam Women’s Memorial Project to establish a memorial on federal land in the District of Columbia to “honor women who served in the Armed Forces of the United States in the Republic of Vietnam during the Vietnam era.” Located next to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, the Vietnam Women’s Memorial is designed to honor all women who served during the Vietnam War. The bronze statue of the Vietnam Women’s Memorial statue (Figure 5) depicts “a nurse—in a moment of crisis—... supported by sandbags as she serves as the life support for a wounded soldier lying across her lap. The standing woman looks up, in search of a med-i-vac helicopter or, perhaps, in search of help from God.”

George Mason

In August 1990, the Board of Regents of Gunston Hall was authorized to build a memorial to George Mason on federal land in the District of Columbia. Located in West Potomac Park, near the Tidal Basin, Jefferson Memorial, and George Mason Memorial Bridge, the George Mason Memorial (Figure 6) was designed in the style of Mason’s Gunston Hall plantation and features a statue of the American patriot and statesmen seated on a bench. Following congressional authorization of the site location, the memorial was placed as an addition to an existing commemorative work to George Mason—the south-bound span of the 14th Street Bridge—that had been authorized in 1959.

Gunston Hall was the home of George Mason and is a National Historic Landmark now owned by the Commonwealth of Virginia. For more information on George Mason and Gunston Hall, see “Gunston Hall: Home of George Mason,” http://www.gunstonhall.org.

African-American Civil War-Union Soldier/Sailors

In October 1992, Congress authorized the government of the District of Columbia to establish a memorial on federal land “to honor African-Americans who served with Union forces during the Civil War.” Located at 12th and U Streets NW, the African-American Civil War-Union Soldiers/Sailors Memorial (Figure 7) features a granite plaza surrounded by a wall of honor on three sides. In the center is a statue featuring “uniformed black soldiers and a sailor poised to leave home. Women, children, and elders on the cusp of the concave inner surface seek strength together.”

Japanese American Patriotism in World War II

In October 1992, Congress authorized the Go for Broke National Veterans Association Foundation to create a memorial on federal land in the District of Columbia “to honor Japanese American patriotism in World War II.” Located at the intersection of New Jersey Avenue NW, Louisiana Avenue NW, and D Street NW, the memorial contains a statue of a crane surrounded by the names of the 10 relocation camps used to house Japanese Americans during World War II. The Japanese American Patriotism in World War II Memorial (Figure 8) also contains the names of Japanese Americans killed in uniform during World War II, a bell, a reflecting pond with five granite boulders, and a quotation by Senator Daniel Inouye.

World War II

In May 1993, Congress authorized the American Battle Monuments Commission to establish a memorial “to honor members of the Armed Forces who served in World War II and to commemorate the participation of the United States in that war.”37 Located on the National Mall between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial between the eastern edge of the Reflecting Pool and 17th Street NW,38 the World War II Memorial (Figure 9) consists of 24 bronze bas-relief panels flanking the ceremonial entrance, 56 granite columns around the Rainbow Pool39 to “symbolize the unprecedented wartime unity among the forty-eight states, several federal territories, and the District of Columbia.” Two 43-foot tall pavilions proclaiming “American victory on the Atlantic and Pacific fronts” are located to the North and South of the pool.40

39 The Rainbow Pool is an historic reflecting pool that was located at the east end of the main reflecting pool between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument. Upon construction of the World War II Memorial, the Rainbow Pool was restored and made part of the memorial. Veterans Who Died as a Result of Service in the Vietnam War

In June 2000, Congress authorized the American Battle Monuments Commission to place a plaque at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial “to honor those Vietnam veterans who died after their service in the Vietnam War, but as a direct result of that service, and whose names are not otherwise eligible for placement on the memorial wall.”47 Located at the northeast corner of the plaza surrounding the Three Serviceman statue at the Vietnam War Memorial, the plaque (Figure 12) is in memory of the soldiers who died as a result of their service in the Vietnam War, after the war’s conclusion.

Victims of the Ukrainian Manmade Famine of 1932-1933

In October 2006, Congress authorized the government of Ukraine “to establish a memorial on Federal land in the District of Columbia to honor the victims of the Ukrainian famine-genocide of 1932-1933.” The memorial is located at a site bordered by Massachusetts Avenue, North Capitol Street, and F Street NW. The memorial is termed “Field of Wheat,” and “contains a six foot tall bronze wall that transitions from a high bas relief of wheat on the east end to a deep negative relief on the west, symbolizing the loss of wheat and food.” (Figure 17)59

Senator Robert J. Dole Plaque

In October 2009, in the Department of the Interior, Environment, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2010, Congress authorized the placement of a plaque to honor Senator Robert J. Dole at the World War II Memorial. The plaque was to “commemorate the extraordinary leadership of Senator Robert J. Dole in making the Memorial a reality on the National Mall.”60

Located on the south side of the World War II Memorial, the Dole Plaque (Figure 18) honors the Senator for his contributions to the World War II Memorial on the National Mall.

Dwight D. Eisenhower

In October 1999, Congress created a federal commission to “consider and formulate plans for ... a permanent memorial to Dwight D. Eisenhower, including its nature, design, construction, and location.”[^61] In January 2002, Congress amended the initial statute to formally authorize the commission to create a memorial.[^62] The memorial is located at Maryland Avenue and Independence Avenue, SW, between the National Air and Space Museum and the Lyndon B. Johnson Department of Education building,[^63] and was designed by architect Frank Gehry.[^64] The Eisenhower Memorial “features three bronze sculptures of Eisenhower … [and] stone bas relief images and inscription panels with words from notable Eisenhower addresses. Framing the entire park and Memorial is a … stainless steel woven tapestry …, which depicts the cliffs at Pointe du Hoc on the Normandy coastline in peacetime” (Figure 19). 65

World War I Memorial

In December 2014, Congress redesignated Pershing Park in the District of Columbia as “a World War I Memorial,” and authorized the World War I Centennial Commission to “enhance the General Pershing Commemorative Work by constructing ... appropriate sculptural and other commemorative elements, including landscaping, to further honor the service of members of the United States Armed Forces in World War I.” Pershing Park is located between E Street and Pennsylvania Avenue and 14th and 15th Streets, NW. The World War I Memorial “features a statue of General John J. Pershing … the Peace Fountain, … [and other] engraved quotes and references to theaters, campaigns and battles in which American forces participated” (Figure 20). In 2024, “The memorial’s central feature, a [58-foot-long bas-relief] sculpture titled ‘A Soldier’s Journey,’ is scheduled for installation.”

Other Completed Memorials

Since 1986, one commemorative work has been authorized by Congress for placement within the District of Columbia, but was ultimately placed outside of the area defined by the act. The Air Force Memorial was located near the Pentagon in Arlington, Virginia.

United States Air Force

In December 1993, Congress authorized the Air Force Memorial Foundation to establish a memorial to “honor the men and women who have served in the United States Air Force and its predecessors. Pursuant to P.L. 107-107, the Air Force Memorial is located at the Arlington Naval Annex near the Pentagon in Arlington, Virginia. The United States Air Force Memorial (Figure 21) was constructed on land not covered by the Commemorative Works Act and is not managed by the National Park Service or the General Services Administration.
